Overcoming Spreadsheet Limitations with QlikView

60 Minute Webinar

With its scalable data engine, powerful data visualization and ease of use, QlikView is being adopted by many organizations to deliver Business Intelligence solutions. QlikView is perfect in situations where fast action is vital to delivering business value. This workshop will look at QlikView and show how it can help when spreadsheets can no longer cope.

12:00-13:00 (EST), Thursday October 28th 2010

Background

While desktop tools such as Excel and Access provide a powerful capability for business users, 'ad-hoc' solutions can grow in size, scope and complexity to become corporate applications, often beyond the technology's realistic capabilities. This can result in issues of data volume limitations, macro complexity, lack of traceability & control and can result in unreliable data. However, finding a cost-effective solution can be challenging with traditional database technologies; QlikView can help.

Content

The workshop will highlight the power of QlikView and show how it can take solutions beyond the capabilities of desktop tools in managing complex data and delivering powerful data visualization. Using real world examples we will show how customers have successfully overcome common challenges in a number of different business scenarios.

Is it for you?

Are you a business user currently working with spreadsheets, or are you an IT professional responsible for managing desktop applications that are creaking at the seams? If so, this workshop could be a worthwhile investment of your time.
