Workshop – Microsoft SQL Server 2012 and Power View

Tuesday 15 November 2011

At this workshop, we will take a look at the upcoming release of Microsoft SQL Server 2012, previously codenamed Denali. Microsoft has made huge inroads into the BI market since its introduction of 'OLAP Services' with SQL Server 7.0. This latest release introduces a whole new world of capabilities aimed at delivering BI capability to organisations large and small.

Join us at this workshop where we will introduce you to SQL Server 2012.

When: Tuesday 15 November 2011, 10:00 – 13:00, with lunch to follow
Where: Ealing Film Studios, London, W5 5EP

Content

During the course of the morning, we will provide an overview of SQL Server 2012; looking at the features, benefits and demonstrating the key capabilities of the product. We will also look at PowerView – the new front end tool included in SQL Server 2012.

The workshop will cover:

- Breakthrough performance
 - Column based data store
 - BI Semantic Model
- Credible and consistent data
 - New data quality capabilities
 - Improvements to master data management?
- BI for the masses
 - User defined alerting
 - Project Crescent – a new reporting tool through PowerView

Is it for you?

Do you already use or are you considering the Microsoft platform for BI? Would it help you to understand the options available to you with SQL Server 2012, to really address your organisation's requirements, and add business value? Would it help you to see what other people are doing? If so, this event will be a worthwhile investment of your time.

Format

The workshop is in an informal round table setting. There will be presentations and demonstrations from our specialists who will also facilitate discussion and answer questions. It will be held at Thorogood offices, Ealing Film Studios on Tuesday 15 November 2011, running from 10:00 – 13:00, with lunch to follow.
